Mokena Couple Return From Extensive Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Koeller Sr. of Mokena returned Sunday from an eight thousand mile vacation trip, the first vacation of any length that Mr. Koeller has had in 14 years. Mr. Koeller is the station agent for the Rock Island at the Auburn Park and Gresham Park station.

They went from Mokena to San Francisco where they took in the fair which they report to be very fine especially the flowers and landscaping. From there they went to Klamath Falls and Portland, Oregon going by motor up the beautiful Columbia river driven to Seattle, Wash., where they happened to be on the 4th of July which allowed them to enjoy the fireworks exhibit as put on by the Japanese and Chinese of that city. They left Seattle by boat for Victoria, Vancouver going from there by motor through the Canadian Rocky mountains to Banff, spending some time at the beautiful Lake Louise. From there they went to Springs, Calgary Canada and to Winnipeg where they witnessed the largest Stampede in the world. They took many side lake trips and while at Winnipeg they witnessed a rock slide and also a glacier slide which does not happen often. Will Explain New Lenox Town Audit Request

Last spring a hot town meeting was held in New Lenox at which a demand was made that the town books be audited. Harvey Johnson a New Lenox taxpayer insisted that an audit be made of the township records and voters at that time let it be known that they favored the audit, but up to now the audit has not been made.

Mr. Johnson says he is determined to find out who prevented the audit from being made and why.

He further states that if the taxpayers of New Lenox want to hear the REAL reason for his demand for an audit of the town books, they should attend the public mass meeting he is calling at the Emiley hall in New Lenox on Tuesday evening, July 25 at 8 p.m. at which time he states he "will shoot the works".

A very lively meeting is anticipated and Mr. Johnson extends an invitation to the entire community to attend this gathering.

Bandit Chase Places Small Towns On Map

Orland, Mokena, Marley and Frankfort, all got on the map last week, following a story that the notorious Jack Russell, Oklahoma desperado, kidnapper and supposed killer, had been seen in this section. Frank Mech, a police man from Blue Island, spotted a car at Orland Park Saturday afternoon which he thought was the one driven by Russell. When he speeded up his motorcycle, the auto driver also stepped on the gas and at times both were doing close to a hundred miles an hour. The fleeing autoist headed down 143rd to Wolf and on to Maple street and by this time the gas supply of the motorcycle was exhausted and the pursuit ended. The officer called police stations in Will and Cook Counties and gave the alarm. In a short time the alarm had been broadcast by radio and all the highways in this area were being watched. The report was that the desperado was in the vicinity of Marley and that section was searched and watched until mid-night, but no sight was seen of the bandit.

Doctors Jeanette Holt of New Lenox and M. J. Buckley of Frankfort reported to the Will County sheriff's office that a man had appeared at their offices seeking a shot of dope and they thought he might be the wanted criminal, but it was later learned that the stranger was a member of a carnival group which had been in Joliet and that he was addicted to dope and was seeking to get a "shot" in the country after failing to do so in the city.

It is doubtful whether the desperado since caught in Ozark, Arkansas ever was in this vicinity.

Last Sunday, Mrs. Kramer, with her husband, Jacob, motored to Clinton, Iowa and visited with their son Jacob, Jr., and wife. Wednesday afternoon she attended a bunco party in the village. She became ill during the party and was taken to her home where she was laid on a sofa and within fifteen minutes, passed away.

The entire community was greatly shocked at this untimely death. Mrs. Kramer was in poor health during the winter and was a patient in Silver Cross hospital, Joliet for a brief time, but of late appeared to be getting along quite nicely.

Mrs. Kramer, nee Barenz, was born in Orland township on January 28, 1878. In the year 1900 she was united in marriage with Jacob Kramer, an express messenger on the Wabash railroad running between Chicago and St. Louis. Mr. Kramer was retired last year, after many years of service with the Wabash.

Mr. and Mrs. Kramer located in Orland Park after their marriage and have resided in the same home on Middle and Brook streets for the past thirty-nine years.

Those surviving are: her husband, three sons; Walter and Clarence of Orland Park and Jacob Jr., of Clinton, Iowa; three sisters; Mrs. Wm. Junker, Mrs. Frank Sievert and Mrs. Conrad Bettenhausen all of Orland Township, and many other relatives and friends.

'Dime Thriller' of World War Sabotage Again Makes News, but Nazis Object

Black Tom, Kingsland Explosions Laid at Germany's Door.

By PETER BEARDSLEE

It was 2 a. m., the morning of July 30, 1916. A watchman yawned into the night from atop a New York skyscraper, cursing the heat that seemed to be drifting in from Jersey City way.

Suddenly something more came from Jersey City.

A ghastly detonation thundered across the Hudson river. Flames seared the sky. Lower New York rocked and a million dollars' worth of glass splintered and showered the cavernous streets.

At that moment 250 carloads of ammunition consigned for allied troops in Europe were blown sky high from the sprawling "Black Tom" pier of the Lehigh Valley railroad. It looked like sabotage.

Six months later, on January 11, 1917, workmen were rushing completion of a $15,000,000 shell order for Russia at the Canadian Car & Foundry munitions plant, Kingsland, N. J. Fellow laborers saw Theodore Wozniak beating at flames around his work-bench, then reach for a pail of liquid which only stimulated the blaze. Within five minutes the Kingsland plant was an inferno and shells meant for Austrians and Germans were rocketing into New Jersey's peaceful skies.

This, too, looked like sabotage. Last June 15, almost 23 years after the Black Tom scare, a German-American mixed claims commission decided it indeed was sabotage, but the decision was largely American-made. After 18 years of negotiations, featured by one reversed decision after another, by story-book spy tales and international intrigue, the German representation walked out just before Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme court refereed that the Nazi government was liable for nearly $55,000,000 damages.

As early as 1924 the German government offered $18,000,000 in settlement, in itself an admission that the Kaiser's saboteurs had been responsible. But the real stranger-than-fiction story of these ghastly explosions comes to light in testimony before the mixed claims commission.

A few minutes after Black Tom exploded a workman named Michael Kristoff was overheard crying: "What have I done? What have I done!" Following him, police and secret service men discovered he had been employed by the Eagle Oil works, adjacent to Black Tom, three days before the explosion; also that he had quit unexpectedly without collecting his pay. For months after that secret agents followed Kristoff night and day, working beside him, tracing every clue that might connect him with the saboteurs. In the end agents were satisfied of his guilt, yet convincing proof of his connection with the German government was missing.

SABOTAGE? This photo was taken a few hours after the first explosion on Black Tom pier, which was followed throughout the night and following morning by intermittent explosions. Only four people were killed but the damage ran into millions.

Much the same thing happened in Wozniak's case after the Kingsland explosion. Of his involvement agents were positive. Yet again they could not link him with the Kaiser. There was too much undercover spy work. In 1930 the claims commission decided against the United States. In 1932 a petition for rehearing was denied but in 1933 the case was again opened with revelations which upset earlier testimony of Frederick L. Herrmann, Brooklyn-born German spy, and Paul L. G. Hilken of Baltimore, who had served as paymaster for saboteurs during the war.

Hilken himself was responsible for the new development. Searching his attic on Christmas day, 1930, he claimed to have found a copy of Blue Book magazine for January, 1917, which was subsequently introduced as evidence with the following story:

In April, 1917, after the United States had entered the war as one aftermath of the Black Tom and Kingsland explosions, Herrmann and other agents were in Mexico to plot destruction of the Tampico oil fields which were supplying allied troops. The German minister, von Eckhardt, doubted that Herrmann, Adam Siegel and Raoul Gerdtz were official representatives of Berlin. Moreover the three spies were short of funds.

To get money and convince von Eckhardt, Herrmann sent a message to Hilken at Baltimore, via Gerdtz, reportedly concealed in the Blue Book magazine. The message itself was written in lemon juice which could be brought out under heat. It covered several pages. Whenever Herrmann came to a name he would write a number like 1755, the first digit being meaningless but the last three referring to a page number where Hilken would find various letters perforated by pins, thus spelling out the name. Part of the message read:

"Have seen 1755 (Eckhardt). He is suspicious of me. Can't convince him I come from 1915 and 1794 (Magguerre and Nadolny, who were German army chiefs). Have told him all, references 2584 (Hinsch) and I, 2384 (Deutschland submarine, which was captured by the United States), 7595 (Jersey City terminal) 3106 (Kingsland) . . . etc."

Later in the message Kristoff and Wozniak, alleged conspirators in both the Black Tom and Kingsland explosions, were mentioned.

This, the court thought, proved beyond the slightest doubt that there was official connection between the saboteurs and the German government. The only refutation came in testimony by two brothers named Qualters, who testified they bought the magazine from a New York bookstore in 1931, that they recognized certain marks they had made, and that the whole revelation was obviously a fraud. Chemists and handwriting experts discredited their testimony, however, proving that the pencil marks had not been made by the Qualters brothers, also that lemon juice would have produced a different reaction if placed on the paper after 1931.

Three years ago at a hearing in Munich the Nazified German government agreed to settle 153 American sabotage claims on a 50 per cent basis. In 1937 the whole story was dragged out again when the German government decided not to ratify the agreement. Last spring, when admissible evidence from the new revelations seemed to be going against the German government, its agent withdrew. Following the decision on June 15 the Nazi press stormed against the United States and took a "try and get it" attitude. The official attitude was that the Third Reich refuses to "recognize the validity of this 'arbitration' and reserves every right of action in this respect."

Claimants may still get about 50 per cent of their demands, however. On deposit in the United States treasury are some $30,000,000 plus bonds issued in connection with the case when Germany was a republic. These securities are now worthless. Total damage in the Black Tom explosion was placed at $20,000,000; in the Kingsland case, $17,000,000.

Fantastic, thrilling as any dime novel, the two sabotage tales are now apparently closed except to historians. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Brain Found to Control Three Phases of Energy

The all embracing law of energy is that it runs in cycles, declares Joseph Jastrow in his article, "The Story of Human Energies" appearing in a recent issue of Hygeia.

Life is a series of rhythms. The energy cycle presents the three phases of energizing, fatigue, and rest. In the core of the brain is a mechanism that sets your program from the cradle to the grave. Day in and day out, with allowance for emergencies and holidays, that portion of the brain has served you as a monitor of the energy cycle.

Conditioning the energy cycle is a chemical traffic system called metabolism. The feelings of energy and fatigue set up the go, caution and stop signs. The body needs more than rest to keep it going; it also needs food. Stoking goes on to supply nourishment; food is metabolized into energy.

It is true that muscles tire and that nerve fibers do not, any more than do the wires of an electric circuit over which the current runs. But it is still truer that the entire neuromuscular set-up is the focus of fatigue; the nerve battery runs down.

ASA: A LIFE OF TRUST

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 14:2-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on thee.—II Chronicles 14:11.

"In God we trust."

These are the words which appear on many of our United States coins. Do we believe them? The lesson for today reveals how real trust in God operates in the life of a nation. The divine principles which were in effect 900 B.C. are just as valid in A.D. 1900. A prayerful consideration of them in the Bible schools of our land today and the application of them to our national life may mean more for our country's welfare than the deliberation of statesmen or the operation of governmental agencies.

The story of the reign of Asa (one of the few godly sovereigns of the nation of Judah) reveals that trust in God calls for an upright life, for intelligent preparation, prayer, and faith. If we trust God we shall

I. Make the Life Right (vv. 2-5).
Asa "did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord." Only such a man or such a nation can really trust God and count on Him for guidance and blessing. Asa destroyed the idols and places of heathen worship (vv. 3, 5), but he also turned his people to the true God (v. 4).

Many are praying that America may have such a revival, which will result in the putting away of sin, which is becoming such a blatant commonplace in our land, and a turning to the true God in repentant and righteous living.

II. Prepare With Care (vv. 6-10).
Asa trusted God but he also made every possible preparation for that which his nation might face. In time of peace he fortified cities and trained his army. This was intelligent faith.

We need not pray that God will keep us warm, if we do not gather and conserve the fuel which He has provided. We must plant, harvest, and store the grain if we are to eat when winter comes. A proper preparation for the defense of our country should precede our prayers for God's protection.

In and through all it is God that works, but at the same time He expects us to do what we can as He enables us to serve Him. The work of the Church of Christ would make great strides forward if His followers would recognize that fact. "We have no right to look for divine co-operation until we have done our best; we are not to sit with folded hands and expect a complete salvation to be wrought for us, and then to continue as idle spectators of God's redemption of mankind. We are to tax our resources to the utmost, gather our hundreds of soldiers; we are to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure" (W. H. Bennett).

III. Pray With Assurance (v. 11).
The Ethiopian host facing Asa's army was so great that humanly speaking his distinction was hopeless, but "one man with God at his back is always a majority." Take courage, Christian friends, trust God. Only be certain that you are on His side and that your life is right, and then be assured that He will give the victory.

The secret of Asa's victorious prayer was that he put no trust in himself, but did believe in God. Says Alexander MacLaren: "My consciousness of need is my opening the door for God to come in. Just as you always find the lakes in the hollows, so you will always find the grace of God coming into men's hearts to strengthen them and make them victorious when there has been the preparation of the lowered estimate of one's self. Hollow out your heart by self-distrust, and God will fill it with the flashing waters of His strength bestowed."

IV. Act in Faith (v. 12).
Asa went out to meet the Ethiopians, but he knew that God went before him, and therefore he saw God smite them.

Right living, proper preparation, and the prayer of faith must culminate in an act of faith. If we believe that God is for us, let us act as though we believed it and step out with confidence to do His will, come what may. God honors that kind of faith, whether it be on the part of a king, leading his nation into battle, or on the part of the humblest believer, seeking to bear testimony for Him.

Consecration
Consecration is not wrapping one's self in a holy web in the sanctuary; it is going into the world and using every power for God's glory.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A God of Justice
No one can exaggerate the goodness of God, save when he robs God of His justice and might, and paints Him as a benevolent but weak grandfather.

COOLING DRINKS FOR SUMMER
See Recipes Below.

Household News

Cooling Summer Drinks

Can you think of anything more cooling and refreshing than a frosty glass of ice cold beverage sprigged with mint and tinkling with ice cubes? Neither can I! There's something about a cold, tart-tasting drink that seems to lower the temperature several degrees.

I like to keep a variety of chilled drinks in my refrigerator to meet the demands of sultry weather; a sparkling punch to serve during mid-afternoon when everyone is wilted and weary; old-fashioned lemonade for thirsty youngsters and grown folks, too; or cool, refreshing iced tea to serve with meals, or whenever the occasion warrants.

Iced tea is a summer standby, and properly prepared it's truly delicious. Follow these simple rules for making it, if you like to serve to your family and your guests the clear, sparkling, faintly fragrant tea that's delightfully refreshing.

Iced Tea.

1. Rinse teapot with boiling water.
2. Place tea in teapot—allowing one teaspoon of tea per cup to be made.
3. Pour freshly boiling water over the tea leaves.
4. Allow tea to steep—not boil—for 3 to 5 minutes according to strength desired.
5. Cool hot tea infusion quickly by pouring it over a generous supply of chipped ice.
6. Serve at once. Lemon slices or a sprig of mint may be used as an accompaniment if desired.

Ginger Julep.

(Serves 4-5)

Few sprigs mint
2 lemons
¼ cup superfine powdered sugar
1 quart gingerale
Cracked ice
Place the mint leaves and the lemon rind, cut in strips, in a pitcher. With the back of a spoon, crush the leaves and the rind. Add lemon juice and sugar, and place in refrigerator for about an hour to ripen. When ready to serve, add gingerale, and pour into tall glasses filled with crushed ice.

Old-Fashioned Lemonade.

1 cup sugar
2 cups water
¼ cup lemon rind (grated)
¼ cup lemon juice
1 quart cold water
Place the sugar, 2 cups water, and the lemon rind in a saucepan. Cover and cook for 5 minutes. Add lemon juice and cold water. Chill thoroughly, and garnish with a sprig of mint or a marshmallow in each glass.

Spiced Syrup.

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup water
Pinch salt
3 teaspoons whole cloves
6 inches stick cinnamon
Bring sugar, water, and salt to the boiling point and boil one minute. Remove from fire and add spices. Cover and cool. Strain before using.

Frosted Grape Juice Ade.

(Serves 6)
4 cups grape juice
Juice of 3 oranges
Juice of 1 lemon
1 pint water
¼ cup sugar
Crushed ice
Combine the fruit juices and water. Add sugar. Dip the rims of tall beverage glasses in lime juice, then in confectioners' sugar to make a frosted edge. Allow to dry. Half fill glasses with crushed ice, and pour in the beverage.

Iced Coffee.

Prepare hot coffee in the usual manner making it a little stronger to allow for dilution. Then pour over crushed ice or tea cubes in tall glasses, and serve at once.

Mocha Freeze.

Pour chilled coffee into tall glasses. Add a generous spoonful of vanilla ice cream to each glass and top with whipped cream.

Bowling Green Punch.

(Serves 8-10)

3 cups orange pekoe tea infusion
Ice
1½ cups spiced syrup
½ cup lemon juice
¼ cup orange juice
1 pint gingerale
Pour warm or hot tea over ice. Add lemon and orange juice and spiced syrup and mix thoroughly. Add gingerale just before serving.

Make Modern Laundry Out Of Waste Space Upstairs

Waste space upstairs can easily be fashioned into a modern laundry, brightened up with paint and hung with some of those attractive low-priced curtains that are always bobbing up in such variety. If you read floor plans of modern houses you have discovered the growing trend for off-the-kitchen-laundries. Equipment designed for such rooms includes washers that pump themselves empty.

Ironing has always been an upstairs operation, possibly because it is easier to transfer ironed clothes to proper storing places without danger of over-mussing. Many ironers have table tops that serve a real purpose in the small kitchen, and there are washers tailored to kitchen size, too.

House Cleaning Is Made Easy by Use of Vacuum

The days are gone forever when, to clean a rug thoroughly, it was necessary to hang it on a clothesline or lay it on the grass and beat it with a bamboo or steel wire contraption.

Today, thanks to electricity and the vacuum cleaner, rug beating is a thing of the past in millions of homes. Moreover, in addition to eliminating much work and drudgery, the vacuum cleaner raises practically no dust and thus greatly reduces the time required for dusting.

Household Refrigerator

To get the best results from the household refrigerator, it is well to decide in advance which foods are to go in and which ones to be taken out instead of pondering the question while the door is open. Every time that happens the temperature goes up and the longer the door stays open the higher up it goes. Another wise precaution is to make sure that cooked foods are well cooled before putting them into the food chest, otherwise the heat and moisture generated will also cause the temperature to rise.

Yellow for Light

To brighten a poorly lighted bedroom, a color scheme includes walls painted daffodil yellow, a paler yellow ceiling and white woodwork with thin lines of orange color.

Care of Dishcloths

New Year Brings New Money; Air Force Starts Expanding

WASHINGTON.—Flush with new funds in a new fiscal year, Uncle Sam this month is embarking on the largest aerial expansion program in history, designed in the next few years to give the nation a superior fighting force and strategic aviation bases which will make the North American continent virtually impregnable from an enemy attack.

By the end of this month contracts will probably be let for construction of 2,500 planes of 10 types, to be followed by 3,000 more ships during the coming two years. Although congressional appropriations are providing for only 5,500 planes, army officials hope mass production will lower the cost sufficiently to permit an extra 500, or 6,000 in all.

Though details of the expansion program are shrouded in official secrecy, it is known that the 10 types of planes are: light, primary, basic and advanced training ships; two and four-engine bombers, one and two - engine interceptor pursuit planes, multipurpose fighters and observation craft. Costs will range from $5,000 or $10,000 for training planes to $250,000 for the heavy bombers, such as the present type 17-ton "flying fortresses."

To man the new ships a broadened pilot training system is being inaugurated. Basic training will be given at nine scattered aviation schools, the cadets to be transferred later to Randolph and Kelly fields, Texas, for advanced training. About 2,000 pilots and 18,000 mechanics will be trained during the next two years. To secure fit candidates, an enlistment campaign has been started to sign up 112,000 men from 18 to 35 years old within the next 12 months.

Many of these men will ultimately be stationed at new military and air bases in tropical Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Panama and Alaska, to be built under new congressional appropriations. The theory behind these locations is that our national security will thus be insured by preventing any possible attack coming from across the oceans either on the surface or in the air.

Panama canal, for which $27,000,000 has been appropriated, must be safeguarded to give the navy complete freedom of movement from Atlantic to Pacific, thereby stopping attack from either direction. Puerto Rico fortifications, added to the present American naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, will make of the Caribbean sea a virtual "American lake" from which invaders could easily be repelled.

Present fortifications on the Pacific coast will be strengthened considerably if Hawaii is made into a "bulwark for defense." Alaskan bases are planned because hostile forces holding that northern peninsula would be in a position to conduct air operations against vital areas of continental United States.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be the exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly, and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"Could—could we keep our wedding a secret?" asked Kay.

"Certainly not. I want people to know. In fact, that's the big idea—so they'll understand that there's no use trying to convict me."

Her thoughts were chaotic. Fragments of ideas. She said, "I wish I hadn't married you."

The car slowed perceptibly. He said, "You're not really damn fool enough to wish that."

His words were not harsh. He merely made a statement. He went on, "You do whatever you want. I'll do the same. If anybody questions you, you don't know a thing. You've got nothing to say."

Kirk was speaking. "I'm dropping you at your house. There's no need repeating anything. Just remember this: keep your guard up all the time."

"But when they ask why?"

"Tell 'em anything. They'll know you're lying—but they won't know the truth. And that's all that matters with me."

There was a car parked in front of her house. A small car. Barney was waiting.

CHAPTER V

Barney drove slowly through the traffic which congested Monument Square. They passed the White Star Hotel, gay in its new yellow paint with white trimmings, and they rolled by the Bon Ton Pool Room before swinging into Palmetto Avenue. Kay said, "Drop me at Dad's office, will you, Barney?"

The young man's face was grave.

He said, "Certainly. Shall I go up with you?"

"No." She left the car and mounted the narrow dusty stairway leading to the second floor of the Fraser Block, that rambling four-story, red-brick structure which served, after a fashion, as Beverly's one and only office building.

Barney gazed upon this section of Beverly with some distaste. As a matter of fact, he was far from happy. He had passed Kay and Kirk Reynolds on the road that morning. He had been waiting at Kay's home when she had returned with the same man. And Barney didn't like Kirk Reynolds. Not that he was at all shocked by the fact that Kirk was a black sheep, a gambler and a gentleman of flexible morals . . . but he knew that Kirk was different and picturesque, and that Kay was young and impressionable.

He waited, it seemed, interminably. The day was ending in a blaze of crimson. He began to fancy himself a very injured young man. He donned a mantle of dignity . . . and discarded it the instant Kay appeared on the sidewalk and climbed into the car beside him.

He saw that she had been crying. It was then that he forgot that he had been ill treated. Kay Forrest crying! It was impossible. It disturbed him profoundly.

He reached over and squeezed her hand. "Have a good time, Duchess?"

She nodded, but the little lump in her throat made speech impossible. Barney plunged ahead, hoping to arouse her. He gestured boyishly toward the radiance which was bathing the country-side.

"Our best and most guaranteed sunset. Positively genuine, or your money refunded. Service free to tourists and patrons of Cathedral Gardens. Particularly interesting on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Ladies' Day Tuesday . . . gee! Kay, isn't there some way I can help?"

It was sudden. Abrupt. Devastatingly kindly—this change from banter to sympathy. Kay's defenses crumbled. Her voice broke and she said, "Oh, Barney . . ."

He drove with one hand, holding her arm with the other.

"Is it as bad as that, Chica?"

She tried to talk, but the words would not come. Unconsciously, she moved closer to him, so that her body touched his. Then she spoke, without taking tear-dimmed eyes from the road. She said, simply, "I love you, Barney."

His face lighted. He clamped on the brakes and stopped the car. But when his arms reached for her, she moved away. The eyes which she turned upon him were filled with tragedy, and she said, "No. Not that. I—I just wanted you to know."

Puzzled, perturbed, he drove on—though very, very slowly. His voice was almost a whisper.

"I love you, too, Kay. But you've known that for a long time, haven't you?" And she answered, "Yes."

Two big cars whirled by them, creating dust-clouds on the gravel road. Dusk was settling over the country-side like a benediction. The air was fragrant with the fine, clean odor of pine.

Barney wanted to help. He knew he must do something . . . anything to shock her out of this emotional depression.

He said gently, "Will you marry me, Kay?"

The effect was startling. Her eyes widened and she turned in her seat. She cried, "Oh! Barney—please don't."

The car had stopped, and night enveloped them.

"Why?" he asked.

"You mustn't . . ."

He held one of her hands between both of his. "But you're wrong, honey, I must. In fact . . ." and he tried to laugh, "In fact, I should have asked you long ago."

She said, then, "I wish you had."

He saw only the top of her head. He heard only the ghost of her voice.

"I'm married, Barney."

He was shocked. "You're what?"

"I'm married."

"But Kay . . ." For the first time he was beginning to understand that life was not always kindly. "I just don't get it."

She shook her head helplessly.

"Neither do I."

She clung to him. "Please try to understand, Barney."

He said, "I'll try, honey. But it doesn't make sense. It isn't you—or me."

His face was serious; older than she had ever seen it. Maturity seemed to have collided with him.

"How long have you been married?"

"A few hours."

"To whom?"

She looked away. "Kirk Reynolds."

"Good Lord! You mean—when I passed you this morning you were on your way to be married?"

"Yes . . ."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"I—I didn't know. Then."

His hand tightened on her arm. "This is all screwy, honey. What do you mean, you didn't know?"

"I didn't. It happened suddenly."

"But why? Surely, you're not in love with him."

"You know I'm not." She tried to be brave. "Listen, Barney . . . try to believe me . . ."

"I'll try."

"I had to marry him—"

"Had to?"

"No! Don't misunderstand. Oh, please . . . It's something I can't explain. That's why I told you first that I love you. It sort of gave me courage to tell you the rest. I married Kirk because I had to . . . because there were reasons which I can't explain to you. Ever."

He said, "Things like this can't happen, honey."

"They have happened. And I need your help more than you can understand. I need to know that you care for me, that you're going to keep on caring for me. And that you won't torture me with questions I can't answer."

"Why can't you answer them?"

"Because I'm afraid."

His jaw was set grimly. "Of what?"

"That's what I can't explain. Don't you see that I'm telling the truth . . . that I didn't do this thing because I wanted to?" She was suddenly more womanly. "If there was any other reason, Barney, I wouldn't be leaving Beverly tonight, would I?"

"I suppose not . . ." His face flushed. "You're not going to live with him?"

"Of course not."

He laughed shortly. This wasn't the Barney she had known for a year and a half . . . and she knew that she had changed, too. Two youngsters faced with ugly fact, grappling with a problem which was too big for them. He said, "There was a reason—of course."

"Yes. And you'd know—if I could only tell you—that I couldn't do anything else."

"Can't you trust me?"

"Yes . . . But I still can't tell you."

She felt his muscles grow taut. "I'm not a child, Kay."

"That isn't it. It's something . . . Oh, Barney! I can't explain. I couldn't even tell my father. He asked everything you are asking."

"What did he say?"

"He was hurt . . . but he understood. He was shocked. But he was kindly—and brave."

"What do you mean, brave?"

A faint, pitiful little smile flickered across her lips. "I gave him the job of telling Mother. And Andy. That isn't going to be very pleasant."

Barney spoke slowly. "You don't love Kirk Reynolds, yet you married him today. You married him because you are afraid of something. You are running away from Beverly because you don't want to face gossip . . ."

which means that you know the marriage won't be kept secret. You couldn't tell your father the truth and you can't tell me. Have I got it right?"

"Yes."

"I think I'll have a chat with Kirk Reynolds."

"No!" She was terrified. "Promise me you won't do that."

"Why not?"

"It would only make matters worse."

"What can I do, then?"

"Just what Dad is doing. You can be my friend. You can, perhaps, try to make me think that you believe whatever I have done is right."

"What's wrong, Son?"

You can let me talk . . . and you can help me to forget the whole thing."

"But if you're married to him—"

"I'm not, though. We simply went through a ceremony."

"That sort of marriage can be annulled."

"Dad said that. But this marriage can't be."

"Why?"

"Because the same thing that frightened me into marrying Kirk would prevent that."

"Will you ever tell me the whole truth?"

"I—I don't know."

"In other words," he said seriously, "you're giving me a job to do. Something pretty rotten has happened to you. It has played hell with your nerves. I'm to snap you out of it if I can."

"Yes . . ."

"You'd like me to forget that this cuts pretty deep. You'd like me to be the clown again . . . to kid along as I've always done . . . to make rather an ass of myself. Right?"

"You make it sound silly."

"I don't mean to. I'm trying to make you see that I understand how you feel. And it would help if I could get you laughing again, wouldn't it?"

She asked, "Could you?"

"I don't know. But I can try."

"Then try . . . please." She caught one of his hands. "But oh! Barney, if you're being very, very funny some time and I suddenly start crying . . . you won't misunderstand?"

"No," he said, "I won't. Not even if I start crying, too."

He started the car and moved on through the night. They did not talk, but again she moved so close that her body touched his. There was something so reassuring in this brief contact, something so fine in the stern expression of his boyish face.

At home they crossed the veranda and entered the big living-room. Mrs. Hamilton greeted them from the chair under the reading-lamp.

"Nice day?" she inquired.

Kay said, "Yes, ma'am."

"Upstairs, You." Barney was smiling gallantly. "And make it snappy."

Barney waited at the foot of the stairway until the girl's slender ankles had disappeared. Then he walked toward his mother's chair. She rose to meet him, instinctively knowing that all was not as it should be.

He put his hands on his mother's shoulders and looked down into her eyes.

"Tough sledding," he said.

"What's wrong, Son?"

"Kay's in a jam. I'll tell you about it before she comes down."

His voice broke slightly. "I know you're going to help—you and Margaret. Be as gentle as you can."

He turned abruptly and walked from the room. Ruth Hamilton looked after him, worry and pride in her eyes.

Something had happened. She knew that a boy had gone to Beverly that morning, and that a man had returned.

At the rear of the White Star Hotel lobby, just opposite the dining-room and near the foot of the stairs, was a door with a sign:

MISS SONIA HENKEL
BEAUTICIAN

If you were a guest of the hotel, this sign would not surprise you, inasmuch as you would long since have found a card on your dresser divulging the same information, with this added: that Miss Henkel was expert and experienced, that she cheerfully and efficiently dispensed shampoos, finger-waves, marcel and facials; that her prices were reasonable and her work swift.

But residents of Beverly had not yet recovered from the shock of Miss Henkel, nor quite allayed their resentment.

This resentment had been, at first, a purely commercial thing emanating from the second-floor beauty-salon owned and operated by a maiden lady named Trelane. Ethel Trelane. Miss Trelane had a permanent-waving machine and other impressive accessories and ever since the commencement of the era in which ladies ceased to keep secret their quest for additional pulchritude, Miss Trelane and her shop had been regarded as the ultimate of Beverly urbanity.

But with the opening of Cathedral Gardens and the sudden and bewildering influx of tourists, Miss Sonia Henkel had come. Mr. Robbie Morse, proprietor of the hotel, was reputed to have made the entirely uncivic remark that Ethel's handiwork might be good enough for these here local dames who never was accustomed to nothin' better, but female tourists had got to have class.

Shortly after being ushered into the world some twenty-five years since in Brooklyn, New York, Miss Henkel's very poor and rather honest parents had christened her Sadie. That name had irked the juvenile Miss Henkel until the first year of high school—whereupon she had abandoned high school and all that went with it, including the name Sadie.

Sadie Henkel left home without particular regrets on either side. The following day Miss Sonia Henkel applied for—and obtained—a position as cash girl in a New York department store. Thereafter, her career was interesting, if not totally immaculate. She acquired gentleman friends, the nickname of Babe, an intriguing dance technique and an intimacy with life which completed her education in an exceedingly practical way.

Thereafter she had been many things to many persons. Cash girl, Seventh Avenue dress model, customers' party girl, manicurist, student at a beauty school—and finally a full-fledged and rather expert beautician. And in the course of her travels she acquired an interesting sophistication, a certain exotic beauty, a husky voice and the protective friendship of Kirk Reynolds. Kirk and Babe were excellent friends.

As a matter of fact, Babe Henkel was very deeply in love with Mr. Reynolds. She admired his virtues and his vices; she adored him for what he was—no matter what. She had come to Beverly to relieve his boredom; she did not permit soggy sentiment to intrude upon their friendship.

This afternoon she had been busy, but the last customer had departed when the telephone rang. It was Kirk; his words close-clipped as usual, his tone authoritative.

"Busy?"

"No."

"Come up."

Babe inspected herself in the mirror. She saw a woman slightly above medium height; well and firmly rounded. Her face was oval and framed by sleek black hair brushed tightly against her head. Her eyebrows were commas, her mouth wide but well shaped; an interesting mouth with a frame of scarlet lips. She closed and locked the door, walked up to the second floor—not unconscious of admiring masculine glances—and knocked on the door of Kirk's room.

He passively accepted the kiss she bestowed upon him. He said, "Sit down, Babe."

She settled her figure into a chair opposite.

"What's on your mind, Kirk?"

"Plenty. Can you take it?"

Two tiny, vertical lines appeared briefly on her forehead. She said, "Let's have it."

He said, "I'm married."

Dark lashes, lashes which were heavy with mascara, rose swiftly from black eyes.

"You're kidding . . ."

"No."

That was all. Curt. Abrupt. Cruel, even.

Miss Henkel's eyes were steady. Dangerous. Her voice matched Kirk's in coldness. She asked, "When?"

"This afternoon."

"Who to?"

"Kay Forrest."

Babe said, "You're a fine louse."

"You think so?"

"I know it."

"Smart girl, ain't you?"

She stared at him. "So what does this make me?" she inquired.

"Anything you want."

"I'm expected to take it sitting down?"

"I don't particularly care."

PALOS PARK

Patricia Saunders and a former resident of Palos Park, Betty Parks, and her parents are leaving Monday for a vacation to Missouri.

Pearl Zaleski's cousin Dorothy, spent an enjoyable weekend in Palos. The Well's family, former residents of Palos, recently boarded a boat for Europe.

Dr. Jeremiah Quinn of Palos also left for Europe. Bon Voyage! to all. Jane and Mary Massey are leaving for Camp Lone Tree, in Three Rivers, Michigan with a troop of Oak Park area Girl Scouts. Here is wishing them good luck and a swell time at camp.

Bill Littlefield, a college chum of Don McCaskey of Ward Belmont College, Nashville, Tennessee is enjoying a visit in Palos Park.

Clarice Mahaffy started for California where she is to meet her mother and then they are going on a tour through the west.

With the exceptions of a few members the remainder of the Palos Juniors spent an enjoyable and thrilling afternoon at Riverview. It was a tired but happy bunch that returned to Palos that evening.

Friday evening at the Palos shelter house the Juniors ate their supper and then proceeded on a long hike through the woods.

The highest honor, a gold medal, was awarded to Joy Reeve, age five, in a musical contest at the American Conservatory last month. Joy plays the piano, but she can also sing.

The Palos Food Market is in a state of confusion, but not for long for new improvements are being made. An inside staircase was taken out and adds plenty room for shelves. The final touch is the tile floor in the store.

With the opening date set for July 31st Washington Park is ready for the 30 day meeting which will mark the return of racing to the South Side of Chicago.

The task of renovating the stable area and cleaning up the huge plant has been completed. Notice to horse men went out immediately that they may ship at their convenience.

Although condition books, detailing the distribution of the $250,000 in purses have been out for only a few days, the response from trainers has been highly satisfactory. There are nine stakes scheduled and although nominations for each do not close until within one week of each running, an encouraging number of entries already have been received.

This late closing idea augurs well for big fields.

First stake day is Saturday, Aug. 5th, when the Chicago Handicap for three-year-olds and up and the Sheridan, exclusively for three-year-olds will be run. More than a dozen nominations already are in.

Bearing out the statement that big fields will be the order is the fact that more than a dozen owners have signified their intention to be represented in the Inaugural Handicap on opening day, July 31st. This is an overnight affair and is sure to draw a limit field.

Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan, will be on hand this weekend.

Clubhouse patrons at Homewood will take their racing with much ease and comfort. Spacious arm chairs, 1,500 in all, have replaced the old ones in the clubhouse boxes.

Unloading activities at Washington Park will increase daily and will reach their peak the middle of next week. Most of the early arrivals are coming from other centers, while a majority of the horses racing at Arlington will not be vanned over until the final day.

Much interest will be attached to the arrival early next week of the Hirsch Jacobs string. He is the country's leading trainer and will race fourteen at Homewood. Six of these are from South America. Four of his foreign bred are from the Argentine, and are in the stake class.

Starter Roy (Boots) Dickerson, who is now handling the barrier at Arlington, again will act in the same capacity at the South Side track. This will be his fifth consecutive year at Washington Park.

Forty Tribes Dance at Gallup Ceremonials

War bonnets, ceremonial paint and feathers signal the approach of the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial to be held at Gallup, New Mexico, August 17-20, inclusive.

GALLUP, N. M.—Indian drums are sounding in the far places of the Southwest. Soon it will be time for the many tribes to gather "at the place by the bridge" (Indian for Gallup, N. M.).

Here each year seven thousand Indians from nearly forty different tribes join forces to produce America's most colorful and spectacular Indian Show, the annual Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial. For four days they will dance, chant, compete in sports and engage in weird pagan rites before capacity audiences made up of their white brothers. The Gallup Ceremonial is the largest and most authentic Indian spectacle of its kind in the country.

Usually the Ceremonial is held the last part of August. But a change in dates has been announced by Joseph Lieberman, Santa Fe agent and this year's president of the Ceremonial Association. The event will open on August 17th and run through four days with the last performance scheduled for the evening of the 20th. In addition to seven regular shows, the association has also arranged a colorful street parade each day except Sunday.

A special attraction each year is the unusual display of Indian arts and crafts in the Exhibit Hall where thousands of articles are shown. A score of native craftsmen will be at work showing the technique of Indian handicraft.

Yes, the Indian drums are sounding in the far places of the Southwest, and soon the Navajos, Zunis, Hopis, Utes, Apaches, Lagunas, Acomas and a score of other tribesmen and their families will start the trek to "the place by the bridge," Gallup, N. M.

Shall We Send Our Youth to War?

By HERBERT HOOVER

The Former President of United States Answers a Question That Is on Everybody's Lips.

(Condensed From August Issue of the American Magazine by Special Arrangement.)

THE American people are today tense with anxiety lest they be led into another great war.

And some of our people seem to be accepting glib talk of war as if it were something more good than evil. Truly many years have already gone by since we ceased to feed boys to the cannon. It seems difficult to believe that only about one-third of the living American people are old enough to remember the World war well.

We have urgent need today to recall the realities of modern war. And we have desperate need to take into our national thinking the gigantic yet invisible forces behind war which are again moving in Europe.

I am perhaps one of the few living Americans who had full opportunity to see intimately the moving tragedy of the World war from its beginnings down through the long years which have not yet ended. I saw it not only in its visible ghastliness, but I lived with the invisible forces which moved in its causes and its consequences. I am perhaps justified in recalling that experience.

Before the war I knew Europe—Russia, Germany, France, Italy, and England—fairly intimately, not as a tourist but as a part of their workaday life.

I was drafted in 1914 to preserve the lives of ten millions of people in Belgium and northern France who had been overrun by the German armies. Here was a service that by common consent was a sort of semiofficial state. It covered not alone food, but the economic life of these people. It operated within the lines of a hostile army and moved through the blockade of a hostile navy. In that service I moved constantly in and out behind the trenches on both sides of the conflict. I witnessed the misery and backwash from war in their most hideous forms. My duties required that I meet constantly with high military and civil officials in England, Germany, France, and the neutral countries in contact with the invisible forces behind the war.

When America joined in the war I was asked by President Wilson to return to America to become a member of our American war council and to administer the food supplies of our country and for our Allies.

At the Armistice I was drafted back to Europe to direct activities of the Allied and associated governments to defeat unparalleled famine and pestilence, to restore economic life among both the victors and the vanquished. In this service I spread an organization of thousands of American men and women over 23 nations—many of them boiling with revolution. Our job was not alone the extension of a hand of kindness. Its purpose was to secure order out of which peace could be made.

Constant dealing with those many peoples and their officials brought a flood of knowledge of the political, economic, and social currents which sprang from the war.

I did not participate in making the peace. I was daily called upon for advice and information. And I observed its disastrous course. Subsequently, during a period of eight years in cabinet position I dealt with the troubled seas of unceasing political and economic storms the world over.

As President I dealt unceasingly to bring about reduction of arms, economic readjustment, and peace.

A year ago I spent some months in Europe with unique opportunity to discuss its problems with leaders in 14 nations.

That is 20 years of opportunity to observe European peoples and their leaders, with all the forces of good and evil in which they live, and to relate them to our American scene. The searchlight of this experience can well be turned upon some phases of the present scene.

What War Really Is.

First, let me say something from this experience of what war really is. Those who lived in it, and our American boys who fought in it, dislike to recall its terribleness. We dwell today upon its glories—the courage, the heroism, the greatness of spirit in men. I myself, should like to forget all else. But today, with the world driving recklessly into it again, there is much we must not forget. Amid the afterglow of glory and legend we forget the filth, the stench, the death, of the trenches. We forget the dumb grief of mothers, wives and children. We forget the unending blight cast upon the world by the sacrifice of the flower of every race.

HERBERT HOOVER

I was one of but few civilians who saw something of the Battle of the Somme. In the distant view were the unending trenches filled with a million and a half men. Here and there, like ants, they advanced under the thunder and belching volcanoes from 10,000 guns. Their lives were thrown away until half a million had died. Passing close by were unending lines of men plodding along the right side of the road to the front, not with drums and bands, but with saddened resignation. Down the left side came the unending lines of wounded men, staggering among unending stretchers and ambulances. Do you think one can forget that? And it was but one battle of a hundred.

Ten million men died or were maimed for life in that war. There were millions who died unknown and unmarked. Yet there are miles of unending crosses in a thousand cemeteries. The great monument to the dead at Ypres carries the names of 150,000 Englishmen who died on but a small segment of the front. There is an inspiring heroism for all time. But how much greater a world it would be today if that heroism and that character could have lived.

Humanity Suffers.

And there was another side no less dreadful. I hesitate to recall even to my own mind the nightmares of roads filled for long miles with old men, young women, and little children dropping of fatigue and hunger as they fled in terror from burning villages and oncoming armies. And over Europe these were not just a few thousands, but over the long years that scene was enacted in millions.

And there was the ruthless killing of civilians, executed by firing squads who justified their acts, not by processes of justice, but on mere suspicion of transgression of the laws of war. Still worse was the killing of men, women, and even children to project terror and cringing submission. To the winds went every sense of justice. To the winds went every sense of decency. To the winds went every sense of tolerance. To the winds went every sense of mercy. The purpose of every army is to win. They are not put together for afternoon teas. They are not made up to bring good cheer or justice or tolerance. They are made up of men sent out to kill or be killed. Whatever the theory, the act that wins is justified in war.

And there were the terrors of the air. In a score of air raids I saw the terror of women and children flocking to the cellars, frantically, to escape from an unseen enemy.

Starving Women and Children.

In another even more dreadful sense I saw inhuman policies of war. That was the determination on both sides to bring subjection by starvation. The food blockade by the Allied governments on the one side, and the ruthless submarine warfare by the Central powers on the other, had this as its major purpose. Both sides professed that it was not their purpose to starve women and children. But it is an idiot who thinks soldiers ever starve. It was women and children who died of starvation. It was they who died of the disease which came from short food supplies, not in hundreds of thousands, but in millions.

And after the Armistice came famine and pestilence, in which millions perished and other millions grew up stunted in mind and body. That is war. Let us not forget.

We were actually at the front in this war for only a few months, but it cost us the lives of 130,000 men. It has placed 470,000 persons on the national pension list already. It has cost us 40 billions of dollars. And that represents more than just dollars. Today we have a quarter to a third of the American people below a decent standard of living. If that 40 billions of wealth had remained in America, these people would not be in this plight. A large segment of our people have already been impoverished for a quarter of a century. And the end is not yet.

We may need to go to war again. But that war should be on this hemisphere alone and in the defense of our freedoms or our honor. For that alone should we pay the price.

The endless books tell us how the Great War originated. They do not agree. But some salient facts do stand out that are pertinent today. It began by a quarrel between three dictators—the czar of Russia and the emperors of Germany and Austria. They were competing for "power." France, a democracy, was dragged in because, out of fear of the dictators of Germany and Austria, she, a democracy, had made a military alliance with the czar. The British democracy was drawn in partly out of idealism to defend liberty, but also partly to save its trade and its possessions from too great a concentration of "power" on the continent. We finally joined in the war wholly out of idealism.

I dodge no responsibility. I reluctantly joined in the almost unanimous view of our countrymen that America must go into that war. We had been directly attacked. But, more important, I believed we could bring the endless slaughter to an end. I believed that with our singleness of purpose we could impose an enlightened peace; that we could make it a war to end war. I believed we could make the world safe for the spread of human liberty. If experience has any value to nations, there are in the wrecking of these hopes a thousand reasons why we should never attempt it again.

Prayer for Real Peace.

When President Wilson arrived in Paris, the common people of the world were praying for a real peace. There were good men there, and there were high aspirations. But there were also concentrated there the invisible forces of age-old hate and greed. Mr. Wilson met a determination to crush the enemy in a Carthaginian peace. He met the sinister demands for power. He met a greed for possession of world resources. Above all, he met with the pressures of populations and the unsolvable problems of European boundaries and economic life. He worked valiantly to combat the evil forces. He spread American idealism at the peace table. He argued and cried out for reason and justice—not because he felt that mankind must turn its face to the future and its back on the past. When Germans blame him, little do they know what Germany would have looked like had it not been for Woodrow Wilson.

To Mr. Wilson I criticized bitterly the provisions of the peace treaties before they were signed. I felt that instead of healing the wounds of the world they would spread disaster over a generation. I have before me a memorandum that I gave to Mr. Wilson two months before the treaties were signed, urging their lack of vision and the dangers to America. He won some victories for sanity. He helped some nations to freedom. He hoped that, with time for hate and aversion to cool, the League of Nations could reconstruct the failures of the treaty.

Americans will yet be proud of that American who fought a fight for righteousness although he partially lost. But he proved that American idealism and American ignorance of the invisible forces in Europe can only confuse the grim necessities of European peace.

What is happening today? Europe is suffering repeated earthquake shocks from the fault of the Treaty of Versailles.

But, beyond all this which is obvious, something else is moving. Europe is again engaged in a hideous conflict for power. Stripped to its bones, today the quarrel is much the same. Dictators in Germany and Italy rise to power on opposition to Communism, launched into their peoples by the dictator of Russia. Again the dictators are in conflict for power. Again France, a democracy, ties herself to the dictatorship in Russia. England becomes endangered should the dictators of Germany and Italy overwhelm France. And thus again begins this dreadful treadmill.

What is proposed? That we join to stop inevitable movements and readjustments of peoples; that we engage in ideological wars. Who will pay for it in blood and treasure? Our children.

The time may come when we could arbitrate the quarrels which arise in that game at some point before shooting begins. But if we sit in the game we shall never be arbitrator and we may be drawn into the shooting.

My sympathies are with the democracies. But the democracies of Western Europe have the resources to defend themselves. They comprise great empires of hundreds of millions of people with all the resources needed to secure their defense. Whether they preserve their democracies is a question of their own will.

America's Service.

America can be of service to the world. We can hold up the standards of decency in the world. We should hold that the basis of international relations should not be force, but should be law and free agreement.

The greatest immediate service that we can render is to join in economic co-operation with other nations to relieve the economic pressures which are driving the world constantly to instability. A great part of these pressures for war are economic. The greatest healing force that could come to the world is prosperity. There is a vast field for American action which is free from political entanglements. We should resume the conferences which were started under such good auspices by our country in 1932.

But, far beyond that, we can hold the light of liberty alight on this continent. That is the greatest service we can give to civilization.

Cushion covers should be easy to remove.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have both of your books and they certainly have been a help to me. I followed your directions in Book 1 for making all of my slipcovers. Recently I started a wall hanging of crewel work embroidery that required many stitches that were new to me. I found them all clearly diagrammed in Book 2, and was certainly glad I had it to turn to.

"I am now interested in covering seat cushions for our dinette. The children have both breakfast and their mid-day meal here. Can you suggest a material that will stand hard wear and that comes in bright colors? G. B."

Striped awning material would give good service and both you and the youngsters would enjoy the gay coloring in this much used corner. Green and orange stripes would be attractive, and this color scheme could be repeated in green curtains and orange paint for the inside of a cupboard. I have suggested slide fasteners for the cushions so that they may be removed easily for laundering.

Dead Sea Coveted

Spurned and avoided as worthless for thousands of years, the Dead sea now is recognized and coveted as a basin filled with minerals of incredible value. Nothing can live in its waters, but through the ages the Jordan river has carried to it the chemical treasures of the desert, and today the Dead sea holds magnesia, potash and other mineral salts worth more than the gold stores of the nations.

To recover these chemicals, used in making matches, cotton goods, glass and many other industrial products, brine is pumped from the lake and allowed to evaporate in shallow basins, leaving the salts to be packed in bags and shipped.—Popular Mechanics.

Mrs. Clay Was Taking No Chances After That!

In a certain little village situated in the backwoods where the people were not overly ambitious, there stood an old cottage, the door of which had to be lifted a little before it could be opened. For this purpose a hatchet was kept near by.

One evening there was a knock at the door, and the young son of the house was sent to see who it was.

"Who is it?" inquired the lad, before opening the door.

"It's me, Mrs. Clay," said the voice outside.

Recognizing the voice, the boy called back to his mother: "It's Mrs. Clay, Mum. Where is the hatchet?"

And when they opened the door, to their surprise their visitor was nowhere to be seen.

Store Employees Help to Harvest Hidden Tax Crop

Will County has an estimated 3,649 "unofficial tax collectors" who indirectly are helping local, state and national governments harvest their annual revenues, the National Consumers Tax Commission declared today.

The unofficial, and generally unwilling, "tax collectors," according to the NCTC are the proprietors and employees in the 1,090 local retail stores.

"There are 17,336 official tax levying and spending governmental agencies in Illinois," said Mrs. Melville Muckleston, president of the nation wide women's organization. "But every clerk behind a store counter is actually a tax collector, too."

"In every sale, these clerks collect fractions of hidden taxes that have increased the cost of production and distribution of the article purchased. These taxes, of necessity, must be passed on to the consumer as a part of the price. A major share of all local, state and national taxes now are hidden to the consumers who pay them this way."

"The store clerks, of course, don't realize it any more than the customer does, but every ring of the cash register represents not only a sale but a tax payment."

The NCTC now has study groups in approximately 5,000 communities in 45 states in its educational campaign to expose "unnecessary consumer-penalizing taxes." Mrs. Muckleston said. The crusade in this state is led by Mrs. Franklin M. Miller of Chicago, national committee member.

Double-Coursed Side-Walls with CERTIGRADE SHINGLES

LOOK GOOD * INSULATE BETTER * COST NO MORE

Double-coursing means laying one Certigrade Cedar Shingle over another to build a substantial wall at no greater cost than the old method of single-coursing because of wider exposure and the use of No. 2 or 3 grade shingles for the under-course.

Double-coursed side-walls create attractive deep shadow lines. Double insulation cuts fuel costs in winter and keeps the home cooler in summer. Come to us for full particulars.

Whether you are replacing an ice-box or an old mechanical refrigerator, there are certain things you should know before buying a modern mechanical refrigerator. To avoid the confusion of wild claims and "loose" selling talk, keep in mind these 6 fundamentals of refrigerator buying:

1. Consider Operating Mechanism. Judge it on simplicity; capacity; economy; and dependability.

2. Consider the cabinet. Judge it on appearance; construction; cold-retaining qualities; finish; and dependability.

3. Consider ice-service facilities. Judge these on fast-freezing ability; capacity; ease of removing and releasing ice cubes; extra storage space.

4. Consider food protection. Judge it on proof of constant safe low temperatures; and on kinds of cold provided for different storage needs.

5. Consider features and savings. Judge features on what they are worth to you and how many you get that are worthwhile. Judge savings on operating cost; food protection ability; and proved savings records of users.

6. Consider the company behind the product. Judge their experience; reputation for sound manufacturing policies; and record of fair and square dealing.

WHAT ABOUT THE MECHANISM?

Of ALL Refrigerator Makes...

ONLY FRIGIDAIRE

HAS THE
CURRENT - SAVING

METER - MISER

Every Frigidaire is powered by the famous Meter-Miser, a sealed rotary mechanism. It is the Simplest Refrigerating Mechanism Ever Built, and when parts aren't there, they can't use current or wear. The Meter-Miser is sealed in steel and never has to be oiled. It operates on less current than an ordinary light bulb. Runs amazingly quiet, trouble-free, year after year. Comes to you with a 5-Year Protection Plan, backed by General Motors.

METER-MISER ECONOMY

See a meter prove how Frigidaire operates on a mere trickle of current—makes ice cheaper than you can buy it!

METER-MISER DEPENDABILITY

See how a 5-Year Protection Plan on the entire sealed-in mechanism protects you against service expense.

CAUTION!

A mechanical refrigerator is only as good as its refrigerating mechanism which must produce ample cold, economically. You'll never be satisfied with an out-of-date, noisy mechanism that labors to produce safety cold temperatures and consumes entirely too much current, especially in hot weather. This type of mechanism is more than likely to cause service expense and annoyance in the kitchen. That's why we say:

WHAT ABOUT THE CABINET?

Of ALL Refrigerator Makes...

ONLY FRIGIDAIRE

HAS A ONE-PIECE ALL-STEEL CABINET

One-Piece Solid Steel Construction

Extra-Thick Blanket of Insulation

Full-Width Door Opening

Lifetime Porcelain or Durable Dulux Exterior

Stainless Porcelain in Food Compartment

Ball-Bearing Door Suspension

All-Steel Torque-Tube Door Construction

● Every Frigidaire cabinet is of one-piece all-steel construction. It has no loose top, no front apron, no bolted-on legs, no screwed-together joints, no side panels. The flush door accentuates graceful Frigidaire styling — swings open on a stainless steel ball-bearing suspension. An extra-thick blanket of cold-retaining, heat-resisting insulation keeps current cost constantly low. Every Frigidaire is finished in beautiful Lifetime Porcelain, the finest of all refrigerator finishes, or in Durable Dulux, the finest of all non-porcelain finishes. ONLY FRIGIDAIRE HAS THE ONE-PIECE, ALL-STEEL CABINET!

FRIGIDAIRE'S BETTER CONSTRUCTION

See how Frigidaire has eliminated all loose parts — there is nothing to rattle or shift out of place. Easiest of all cabinets to keep clean.

FRIGIDAIRE'S FINER FINISH

See how grease, dirt, and flame fail to mar the gleaming beauty of Frigidaire's Lifetime Porcelain — how bending will not crack the enduring finish of Durable Dulux.

FRIGIDAIRE'S THERMO-SEALED INSULATION

See why Money-wasting moisture cannot seep into the Frigidaire cabinet and make insulation useless. Actually, time improves the efficiency of Frigidaire insulation!

FRIGIDAIRE'S AMAZING STURDINESS

Frigidaire's one-piece cabinet is built so strong it will withstand the weight of a 4-ton elephant!

CAUTION!

● Many "hidden losses" of a refrigerator originate in the cabinet. A poorly constructed cabinet can "waste" current and "lose" the cold produced. It can fail to keep safety cold temperatures, thereby placing food and health in danger. It can also be a source of service expense and have very short life.

WHAT ABOUT ICE SERVICE AND FREEZING ABILITY?

Of ALL Refrigerator Makes...

ONLY FRIGIDAIRE

HAS "DOUBLE-EASY" QUICKUBE TRAYS

IMITATED BUT NEVER EQUALLED

● From freezer to glass, Frigidaire supplies ice quicker and easier than any other refrigerator. Frigidaire's Quickube Trays are faster freezing because they're all-metal. Every Quickube Tray has an Automatic Tray Release built into the handle. There are no separate bars or lifters to lose. Ice cubes are released instantly at the touch of a single built-in lever. The elimination of meltage waste gives you 20% more ice. Every Frigidaire has storage space for a 100% reserve supply of ice cubes. ONLY FRIGIDAIRE HAS DOUBLE EASY QUICKUBE TRAYS!

FRIGIDAIRE'S SUPER FREEZER

Makes Ice Cheaper Than You Can Buy It!

● Frigidaire's Super Freezer, of one-piece solid brass construction, has no moving or wearing parts. Certified tests show that, based on average electric current rates and retail ice prices, Frigidaire will actually make ice in the home at lower cost than you can buy it!

FRIGIDAIRE ENDS ALL ICE STRUGGLE

● See how Frigidaire has eliminated all "gadgets" and "pryers". There's nothing to lose or misplace. No bent handles. No broken links. No twisted grids.

CAUTION!

● Some refrigerators aren't capable of freezing ice quickly. Others do it only at greatly increased operating cost. Some have ice trays that are hard to get out. The separate ice tray "pryers" and ice cube "jerkers" which some refrigerators provide are often difficult to use and more of a nuisance than a convenience. You will want an abundance of ice, quickly frozen, and instantly removed without waste or fuss. That's why we say:

WHAT ABOUT FOOD PROTECTION?

Of ALL Refrigerator Makes...

ONLY FRIGIDAIRE

Gives You All These Features For Safer, More Economical Food Protection, and A Wider Range of...

SELECTIVE COLDS!

Every Frigidaire maintains safety zone temperatures throughout the entire food compartment, regardless of weather. This is proved by a Food-Safety Indicator built into the cabinet. Temperatures and freezing speeds can be regulated at will with the Uni-Matic Cold Control. The Super-Freezer, Meat-Tender, Moisture-Seal Hydrators, combined with the economical Meter-Miser and One-Piece All-Steel Cabinet provide just the right cold for every storage need.

MULTIPLE-COLD FOOD PROTECTION

In 1930 Frigidaire introduced the first moist-cold storage compartment and also the original multi-cold refrigerator providing a wide variety of Cold Conditions for different kinds of food. Since then, Frigidaire has always provided a maximum of selective Cold Conditions and as a result of constant improvement in food-keeping conditions, now offers you this advanced Multiple-Cold.

SUB-FREEZING COLD

A 2-way compartment for the rapid making of ice and desserts, and for the frozen storage of meats, ice cream and "quick-frozen" foods.

MOIST EXTRA-COLD

In this position the Meat-Tender provides low temperatures and the proper combination of directed air circulation and humidity, which fresh meats require.

DRY EXTRA-COLD

With top inverted, the Meat-Tender provides dry extra-cold for chilling of canned juices, bottled goods, or storage of ice cubes, desserts.

NORMAL COLD

Constant safety zone temperatures are provided for milk, butter, eggs, and covered foods of all kinds.

MOIST COLD

Frigidaire's Moisture-Seal Hydrators provide high humidity and safety cold temperatures to keep fruits and vegetables crisp and fresh until needed.

FRIGIDAIRE PAYS FOR ITSELF!

...WITH SAVINGS

on Food!

Food spoiled through improper refrigeration, represents good money wasted. Frigidaire keeps food from spoiling — also enables you to save on quantity purchases and "bargain specials."

...WITH SAVINGS

on Operating Cost!

Checkups show the operating cost of a Frigidaire with the Meter-Miser is usually less than half that of old-fashioned refrigerators — both ice and mechanical — and gives you savings nearly as great when compared with some new refrigerators.

...WITH SAVINGS

on Upkeep!

This savings can be large or small, depending on the refrigerator you buy. Poor construction, or a poor mechanism, can cause large service bills. Frigidaire's sealed-in-mechanism is protected for 5 years against service expense.

CAUTION!

Food protection is the primary reason why you buy a refrigerator. So choose one that will not fail to keep proper temperatures, even in hottest weather. Get proof that it will keep food in every part of the interior in absolute safety. Make sure that in keeping safety cold temperatures it does not send operating costs skyward. Demand a refrigerator that gives you the right kind of cold for every storage need. Food safety is mighty important. That's why we say:

X-RAY PROOF!

Out of experience gained from building more than 5 Million Frigidaires has come the amazing new "Cold-Wall" principle of keeping food—a proven advancement which definitely marks a turning point in refrigeration history. The "Cold-Wall" Frigidaire is the only refrigerator of its kind in the world—built on an entirely new principle. The upper compartment is refrigerated by the Super Freezer just as always. The lower compartment is refrigerated by refrigeration coils concealed in the walls of the cabinet, located on all sides, including the bottom of the "Cold-Wall" compartment. Thus the "Cold-Wall" maintains uniform low temperatures . . . 85 to 100% humidity . . . and eliminates moisture-robbing air circulation! Keeps uncovered foods better and longer than any other refrigerator—saves foods from drying out. See proof! See why you don't have to cover foods! See how odor-and-flavor transfer is checked! See how even highly perishable foods stay deliciously fresh for days—how fruits and vegetables keep their color, freshness, and flavor far longer!
